About the project

The project focuses on how leadership can become a shared, horizontal and empowering process, capable of valuing diversity and actively involving young people with different backgrounds and opportunities.

Through non-formal education methods, experiential learning and peer exchange, participants will explore concrete tools to create inclusive spaces, manage diverse groups and foster active participation within youth communities.

A key innovative element of the project is the dialogue between youth work and the profit sector: participants will engage with private companies that have developed strong and authentic approaches to inclusivity, diversity and organisational well-being.

The project strongly believes in learning as a collective process and in communities of practice as a driver for change. Youth workers will not only develop individual competences, but also co-create shared knowledge, methods and tools that can be transferred to their organisations and local communities.

Participants will stay at the Fattoria Sociale Paideia, a social farm and welcoming countryside space managed by Fondazione Paideia.

The farm provides a peaceful environment immersed in nature, designed to support learning, well-being and inclusive experiences, with large green areas, open spaces and opportunities to connect with the surrounding landscape.

Accommodation will be organised in shared apartments grouped by gender, offering comfortable living spaces. The farm also features a swimming pool and extensive outdoor areas for free time, informal exchanges and recreational activities, creating the conditions for a positive and balanced residential experience.
